The Editors
Third World Law Journal

Dear Editors,

In honor of the inaugural edition of the Third World Law Journal, I would like to extend my congratulations to the entire staff for making a unique and worthwhile contribution to the law field. There is currently no publication in which legal developments that take place in the Third World are monitored - no journal that gives the discussion of Third World legal issues a place of centrality.

I commend the members of the three Third World associations at Boston College Law School for realizing that a good opportunity existed for the creation of a Third World Law Journal that would (a) fill the void and give primacy to the legal problems of the Third World; and (b) foster intellectual toughness through the development of excellence in scholarship, analysis and writing. Such a publication has been long overdue, yet its timeliness reflects a regeneration of cohesiveness in Third World thought and action.

You have my support and encouragement in this serious endeavor. I look forward to being a dedicated reader of each issue.

Good luck and best wishes for your continued success.

Sincerely,

Honorable Joyce London Alexander
United States Magistrate
