Miko '13 Wins Prestigious Deak Award

2014

04/14/14

Newton, MA—Boston College Law School is pleased to announce that Samantha Miko ‘13 has won the prestigious Deak Award for her note. This is the second year in a row a BC Law student has won the award and the third time overall. Miko’s note was published in the Boston College Law Review and is entitled Norm Conflict, Fragmentation, and the European Court of Human Rights, 54 B.C.L. Rev. 1351 (2013), and is available here.

"Our success with the Deak Prize reflects well on the intellectual curiosity of our students and the nature of the relationships they share with professors," said Frank Garcia Professor of Law and Associate Dean for Global Initiatives, "Our professors are active scholars who take students seriously as thinkers and reformers. Professors also work closely with students, nurture their writing, and encourage them to tackle real projects and questions and not just narrow safe technical issues."

The daughter of a Polish immigrant, Miko said her family background and undergraduate studies in international relations planted the seeds for her interest in international law, but her courses at BC Law cultivated that interest and allowed it to grow. Miko said her first-year elective, International Law taught by Professor Wirth, motivated her to pursue admission onto the International & Comparative Law Review.

Miko also said Professors Perju and Barrozo’s jointly-taught seminar on Philosophy of Law: The Past and Future of the State forced her "to think critically about our notions of statehood, global governance, and the structure of the international system. Taking that class in the fall of my 2L year influenced me to consider the topic of fragmentation in the international system for my note."

Now an associate at K&L Gates, Miko says she gravitated toward global law firms because she "really enjoys being part of a global platform where lawyers interact with their counterparts in other countries regularly."

The Deak Award is a prize provided by Oxford University Press for the best international-law student article in a student-edited law journal. The award honors Francis Deak, a WWII veteran who wrote extensively on international law. The award is the student equivalent of the prize separately awarded by the American Journal of International Law (ASIL) for the best article in the Journal.

Miko is the third BC Law student to receive the Deak Award. Ron Kendler ’12 won the Award last year. His note "Delayed Fight: The World Trade Organization Dispute Settlement Mechanism, Negotiation, and the Transatlantic Conflict over Commercial Aircraft” was published in the Boston College International and Comparative Law Review, 35 B.C. Int’l & Comp. L. Rev. 253 (2012), and is available here. BC Law’s first winner, Jessica Spiegel ’01, received the Award for her note "Will the Great Banana War Ever End: Will the Tariff Only System Be the Solution?” which was also published in the Boston College International and Comparative Law Review, 24 B.C. Int’l & Comp. L. Rev. 219, 2000, and is available here.
