The Boston College Legal History Roundtable and the Clough Center are co-sponsoring a talk by Professor Pauline Maier of M.I.T. The topic of the discussion is "James Madison Reconsidered: The Significance of the Ratification Debates of 1787-88 for Interpreting the Constitution," and will take place on the law school campus in East Wing room 200 from 4:30-6pm on Wednesday, February 9th.

Professor Maier is the William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of American History at MIT. Her new book, Ratification: The People Debate the Constitution. 1787-1788 (2010) has been reviewed as "delightful and engrossing" (NY Times), "a remarkably patient, clear-eyed, and deeply balanced account" (Jack Rakove), "with style, wit, and incomparable mastery" (Joseph Ellis), and "the definitive account" (Richard Beeman).

This is a public event and all are welcome. For more information, please contact Erin Murphy at erin.murphy.13@bc.edu or at (617)552-4125.
